

What Lead Containment Means To You

Lead dust containment is critical to the new EPA lead-safe work practices and we offer the most cost-effective dust barrier system to meet these requirements. As of April 22, 2010, all renovations in pre-1978 homes and child-occupied facilities, conducted for compensation, must be performed by EPA certified firms using EPA certified renovators.

Who And What Is Affected By This New Law?

Just about everybody involved in a pre-1978 home. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, these homes account for 68% of the nation's total housing stock.

Since the law specifies any project that involves more than 6 square feet of interior painted surface or 20 square feet of exterior surface, 99.9% of renovation projects will be affected. That means that contractors who install windows, insulation, home entertainment equipment or similar items in the target housing must become certified to do the work.

What To Do

Review the lead-safety materials contained in this pamphlet to determine what items you need to safely perform the work.

FOR INSIDE WORK:

- Use signs to keep residents and pets out of the work area
- Remove furniture and belongings, or cover them securely with heavy plastic sheeting
- Cover floors and other fixed surfaces like large appliances
- When appropriate, use heavy plastic sheeting to separate the work area from the rest of the residence
- Close and seal vents in the work area and, if necessary, turn off forced-air heating and air conditioning systems

FOR OUTSIDE WORK:

- Mark off the work area to keep non-workers away
- Cover the ground and plants with heavy plastic sheeting
- Close windows and doors near the work area
- Move or cover play areas near the work area
